Q: What should my consultation with my photographer involve?

A: Your photographer will try to get a mental image of what you are looking to capture at your wedding. Vivos Images gives you a portrait request list which your photographer will go through with you, detailing candid of the bride getting ready, wedding procedures and add-ins, family arrangements, and reception traditions. On your wedding day, we will verbally run down the request list as we are photographing, to keep you informed and encourage you to relax and enjoy this monumental day.

Due to modern technology, there are now many portrait options easily accessible for bridal couples. Some possibilities you may want to discuss with your photographer are:

- Gallery-Wrap Prints
- Folded Thank You Cards
- Web-Sized Images for Facebook, Twitter or other digital media

For Weddings, Vivos Images
Focuses on Four Areas of Photography Concentration:

Ambience – This area covers all the details that make your wedding day unique. From close-ups of the bridal rings to the grand image of your reception hall, these images will recall the mood and setting of the day.

Candid – A wedding day is full of joyful emotion; as the day's events unfold, reactions come and we discreetly capture them.

Classics – As timeless as Old Masters' painter's poses, classics make the most of family, friends and bridal party positioning and posing for maximum effect.

Romance – Despite a fully-packed and eventful day, we always make time for intimate moments between the bride and groom. Away from the crowd, these images tend to be the bridal couple's favorite memories and portraits of the day.
